It always seems like a “fresh start” to begin a new year. For the college, nothing will be really “new or fresh” in 2016 because we have so many things in progress. Our work seems to be very dynamic in nature and usually spans a multitude of years. The things we have going on include the continued evolution of our OTA and OTD programs, development of EMT/Paramedic program-ming, recrafting of our Graduate Certificate in Aging Studies, formal documentation to support Graduate Certificates in Nurse Educator and Nurse Administrator and implementation of our heavily revised MIRS curriculum.

We will have an on-site accreditation visit in late January for our OTA program. Our self-study for the dietetics program was sent before the holiday break. Many annual accreditation updates/reviews have taken place and paperwork seems to be the “flavor of the day”. Even though it is very time consuming and often stressful, it is important for external entities to objectively review our work.

We have made progress on some new spaces in the college that will maximize our ability to educate, do research and provide service delivery. The lab we will use to support EMT/Paramedic education has been designed. Research work is already taking place in our Phototherapy Institute. One project involves osteoarthritis and another is a study on listeria. We have acquired a driving simulator that we will use for evaluation, education and research purposes. We will also configure an additional mini-simulation lab in support of interdisciplinary education. There is certainly lots of good work going on and you will see more of it as you read the department updates and the additional articles in this newsletter.

In a new year, it is always good to thank our supportive clinical sites who take so many of our students for that portion of their professional education. We contract with over 500 sites. We could not operate quality programs without you. Our alumni continue to provide the discretionary resources that we need to do “bigger and better” things. Our special thanks to them for believing in the work we do. We have other friends out there who provide all types of support including advocacy, legislative and monetary. We are grateful for their attention and work. Faculty and staff in this college “are the best” in my opinion. Students will echo those sentiments and, as you know, we have excellent students as well. What a collaborative effort! We are thankful for all of our quality partners and extend best wishes for a memorable 2016.

And on a very sad note to start off the new year, we lost one of our former faculty members to her long, hard fought battle with kidney cancer. Rebecca Matthews touched many of our lives (faculty and staff) and certainly a large number of students. See attached article on “Reflections of Rebecca”.

América’s Best Nursing Schools

by Dr. Angela Schmidt, Associate Dean

The School of Nursing has been selected as the highest ranked nursing program in Arkansas and as one of the top 10 collegiate nursing programs in the eastern region of the United States. The nursing program at Arkansas State University is one of the largest on campus in terms of enrollment and ranks highly among degrees conferred. Among majors by college, nursing ranks second for undergraduates and graduates.

The Nurse Journal organization recognizes nursing programs for providing a quality education at a reasonable cost and for offering educational options that make it easier for today’s busy students to attend. Their mission is to educate, inform, and share information.

To determine the ranking as the #1 Nursing School in Arkansas, 1,189 schools were evaluated by 20 metrics in five categories: quality, affordability, convenience, satisfaction, and value. Most of the data used to determine rankings came from the Institute of Education Sciences, Rate My Professors, PayScale, the Bureau of Labor Statistics, the state Boards of Nursing, and individual school websites. The five categories included the following metrics: Quality (NCLEX Pass Rate, Institutional Accreditation, Nursing Program Accreditation, Highest Degree Offered, Graduation Rate); Affordability (Tuition and Fees, Financial Aid Percent, Percent of Tuition and Fees Received as Aid, Student Loans, Net price); Convenience (Distance education options, Weekend/evening classes available, Online or hybrid nursing program); Satisfaction (1st- to 2nd-

Reflections on Rebecca

by Susan Hanrahan, Dean

Despite all of the sadness associated with the death of Dr. Matthews, I wanted to spend a little time sharing why she was so important to our college and what her loss means to us. She resigned her faculty position May 15, 2015, because she didn’t think she could do the “quality” of work she wanted to do since her treatment regimen took her to Nashville every two weeks. That was Rebecca—all about quality.

She was also “grateful” for her nine years at A-State and the opportunities she was given. She loved her colleagues and her students and she had a particular fondness for the Healthy-Ager program (Shawn, students and the healthy-agers themselves). That was Rebecca—capitalizing on every significant opportunity and immersing herself into that activity to understand it, enhance it and “own” it.

Despite the fact she was ill, her concern was more about caring for her family and her parents, in which she expressed the need to care for them was greater than ever. The same could be said for her work with colleagues and her students. That was Rebecca—absolutely all about everyone else but herself.

When she first came to the university from the not-for-profit world I recall a conversation we had expressing the fact that teaching was so different than what she thought. Her students evaluations were not as good as she wanted them to be and maybe she should consider leaving academia. I asked her to give it some time because the role required a transition period and it was absolutely a new process. So, what did she do—she immersed herself in continuing education activities to enhance her teaching and knowledge, attending the Blackboard Learn boot camp, incorporating technology, like iTunes U, and using new teaching methods like the “flipped classroom,” which apparently served her very well. Her student evaluations immediately began reflecting how wonderful and knowledgeable she was in her teaching role. That was Rebecca—always striving for perfection.

Rebecca never left the community behind when she came to the university. Her work on the Red Cross board, committee member for Total Life HealthCare, Chair of the Jonesboro Community Transportation Board, Board President for The Better Life Counseling Center, providing expert testimony regarding safe sleep environments for infants 0-12 months to reduce the incidence of SIDS (state law was subsequently revised— the list goes on and on. That was Rebecca—using her knowledge and expertise to make a difference in our community and across the state.

Never to be one satisfied with her level of knowledge, Rebecca earned a certificate in Meta-Analysis, maintained her International Board Certification as a Lactation Consultant, completed the Chronic Disease in Self-Management Lay-Leader program, was “A Matter of Balance” coach and completed summer programming through the Arkansas Geriatric Training Center among other comprehensive topical areas. That was Rebecca—she was passionate about lifelong learning.

Scholarship was new to her when she came to the university—but not for long. She quickly had articles in press, was speaking on her research work nationally and internationally, worked with the research office to prepare a NIH R15 grant proposal, was a textbook reviewer, on an editorial board and even completed her doctoral work while she was at A-State. That was Rebecca—eager to establish new skill sets which included acquisition of data and dissemination of her evidence-based work.

And speaking of international, I had the pleasure to visit China with Rebecca and her daughter—a trip she led on behalf of the college. That was Rebecca—always exploring lands “unknown” to her (including her love of our shared passion— hiking).

Leading—another of her strengths at the university and beyond. Leading the Faculty Research Awards Committee, chairing work documenting nursing accreditation standards, chairing School of Nursing goal plans, president of ARNA District 6, etc. That was Rebecca—stepping up to the plate to communicate, organize, problem solve and lead.

I have just barely touched on her importance to our college, but let me share what others have also noted. Former university president, Dr. Les Wyatt—“GIANT loss to our community;” Melanie Mata (nursing faculty)— “She was the yen to a lot of our zen in the dept;” Erin Stegall (nursing faculty)—“grateful to have gained a bit of wisdom from her before her departure from this earth.” Erin Stegall will continue to lead and live by her example;” and Brenda Goodwin (staff)—“saddened at the loss but she is on her way home (know she is a believer).”

Phyllis Skorga Retirement
by Dean Hanrahan

Dr. Skorga was hired in the fall of 1998 as an associate professor of nursing. Her BSN and MSN were from the University of Tennessee and her PhD in nursing research is from one of my alma maters, the University of Kansas. Phyllis was tenured in 2003 and became a full professor in 2004. Prior to coming to A-State she did some work for the University of Memphis, University of Kansas, University of Tennessee, Northwest Mississippi Junior College and Baptist Memorial School of Nursing. She also did a variety of other things in her career including work for Southern Health Plan, University of Tennessee Hospital, City of Memphis Hospital, Rape Crisis Center, Baptist Memorial Hospital, and Jackson Memorial in Miami, FL.

Phyllis taught predominately graduate courses, with many involving web and online teaching. Her student evaluations were also very consistent suggesting excellence, professionalism, concern for students, dedication and other variables conducive to quality teaching. I couldn’t find any qualitative comments with any “humor.” All of them depicted Dr. Skorga’s stellar work in teaching.

Her scholarship was wide ranging. She was part of the Debbie Persell team that capitalized on the first waves of “terrorism” by writing numerous articles on nuclear, biological and chemical terrorism. Her national presentations have been to a variety of audiences in many different subject areas, including distance learning, interdisciplinary teaming, community based education, primary care, dementia, smoking cessation and so forth. She and Charlotte Young completed some Cochrane evidence-transfer summaries and Phyllis also published in a wide variety of journals. She served as a mentor to faculty and graduate nursing students. One of her biggest projects was the acquisition of the HRSA Delta Health Education Partnership from Grace Whites. The DHEP project was multifaceted but as it progressed, she also became involved in USDA work and in collaborations with other entities for direct and indirect funds that served the region well. She did other HRSA grant work involving nurse anesthesia traineeships. Phyllis was a reviewer for the Southern Nursing Research Society, on the Honorary Editorial Board for Nursing Research and Review Journals and a member of the Executive Editorial Board and the Reviewers Task Panel for the IntellectBase International Consortium.

Phyllis was the faculty achievement award winner for service in 2000. She previously served on a variety of state steering committees and has been known for her work in primary care, rural health and rural-development issues. She spent a few years directing the graduate nursing programs. She also participated in the Doctor of Nursing Practice planning committee. She served the school, college and university in many different capacities including participating in the Arkansas Rural Loan Scholarship Committee. Professional memberships included those with the National Case Management Society of America, National League for Nursing, Southern Nursing Research Society, National Organization of Nurse Practitioner Faculties, American Nursing Association and Sigma Theta Tau. Have a happy retirement!

Darlene Baker Retirement
by Dean Hanrahan

Dr. Baker was hired as a temporary instructor in nursing at A-State in 1990 as a partial replacement for Mary Hartwig, who was on education leave without pay. In 1991, she went on to be a permanent full time faculty member as assistant professor, as Dr Hartwig went to graduate school for the last 25 years. She graduated from A-State with her ASN, University of Central Arkansas with her BSN, University of Arkansas for Medical Sciences with her MSN and her EdD in Higher Education from the University of Memphis. One of my fondest memories of Darlene was the limo parked in front of the college taking her away after she was awarded her doctoral degree. Before she came to A-State, she had clinical stints at St. Bernards, The Med, Doctor’s Hospital in Little Rock, Baptist Medical Center in Little Rock and in the office of Dr Harvey Edwards who was an orthopedic surgeon in Jonesboro. Darlene’s expertise has always been in critical care and she gave numerous presentations throughout the state on Arrhythmia interpretation, critical care, advanced cardiac life support, ABG interpretation, etc. She held professional memberships in the American Association of Critical Care, Emergency Nurses Association, American and Arkansas Nurses Associations, Kappa Delta Pi International Honor Society in Education and Sigma Theta Tau Honor Society in Nursing. She had advanced nursing certifications in Critical Care and Emergency. She was awarded tenure in 1996 and promoted to associate professor in 2015. She was certified in online teaching. Her students comments on teaching were always pretty consistent--excellent instructor and role model, best instructor I have had and a valuable resource. More specific comments were “hits the high spots and skips the clutter,” “gave me faith in myself—like I could really be a nurse,” she was a stress relief—grading was more objective vs. subjective and the clinical atmosphere was more conducive to learning vs worrying.” “Ms. Baker is very professional—at the same time she expects a lot from the students: it is not to the point of making our lives hell” and lastly “she loves chocolate too much.”

MIRS Students Day of Service
by Veronica Manning and Tracy White
Radiologic Technology week is a time to celebrate the profession and is always held the week of November 8 in recognition of Wilhelm Roentgen’s discovery date of X-rays. It is a time to bring awareness and pride to the profession. This year, the A-State Medical Imaging and Radiation Sciences department decided to do something a little different. The department formed a student committee representing each MIRS program (Radiography, Radiation Therapy, Ultrasound and Magnetic Resonance Imaging), and challenged students to design a “Day of Service” to give back to the community. This was an attempt to convey to students that health care professionals also have responsibilities of service in addition to their clinical roles. They established four volunteer opportunities for Friday Nov. 13. Carlee Creel and Madelyn Dozier, Radiography program President and Vice President were guests on KAIT Region 8 Midday on Tuesday, November 10, to promote the event.

• The David Puryear Center – students worked with residents during their daily workstations and made cookies for the center’s annual chili cook-fundraiser.
• A-State Student Nurses Association
This year has been busy for the Student Nurses Association. One of the most important accomplishments this year was the Internal Revenue Service granting the organization official status as a 501c(6) non-profit. This will allow the students to learn in real time the business side of community and professional service through the Student Nurses Association. Another project added this year is students teaching CPR, which as it progresses will include educating local high school teachers to fulfill one of the resolutions adopted by the National Student Nurses Association House of Delegates. Currently there are 12 students who have been trained as American Heart Association instructors. They were also able to purchase their own training equipment to allow greater flexibility for providing CPR courses to students in CNHP and people in the community.

Baker Retirement
Her scholarship revolved a lot around teaching and learning and she was awarded the Outstanding Paper Award at the 19th Annual World Conference on E-Learning in New Orleans. She was a member of the editorial board for the Journal of Nursing Education and Practice, participated in the Arkansas Nursing Research Alliance and was a mentor to a variety of graduate nursing students on research like our own Kacie Altom.

Some of her other service work included working on an ad hoc committee to develop the master of science in health science, had responsibility for the nurse educator option in the MSN program, as commencement marshal, on faculty senate, and was on the executive committee of the NEAR Chapter of the American Association of Critical Care Nurses. She won the clinical nurse educator award in 2001 from the Arkansas Nurses Association District 6, distinguished alumni award from the A-State School of Nursing in 2008 and two awards from the Northeast Arkansas Chapter of the American Association of Critical Care Nurses. What started out as her special project work on an entry-level masters degree in nursing soon became the second degree accelerated program. She also participated and has led in lots of accreditation work and other department and college committee work. She also worked to host the advanced trauma life support class, which was presented by the Arkansas Trauma Education and Research Foundation. Best Wishes to Darlene!

Title IV-E Academic Partnership in Public Child Welfare

by Karen Fullen, PI/Program Director

The welfare of Arkansas children in Child Protective Services has entered a state of crisis. There are increases in the numbers of cases being reported and investigated by the Division of Children and Family Services (DCFS) and the Arkansas State Police (ASP); cases substantiated and perhaps the most critical, the numbers of children in the foster care system are extremely demanding and the turnover high, with more than 50 percent of current DCFS workers having less than one year on the job. The A-State Title IV-E field trainers work diligently to prepare, educate/train, coach and mentor students, new DCFS workers and supervisors and providing on-going advanced education for veteran DCFS staff.

The workload responsibilities of caseworkers are extremely demanding and the turnover high, with more than 50 percent of current DCFS workers having less than one year on the job. The A-State Title IV-E field trainers work diligently to prepare, educate/train, coach and mentor students, new DCFS workers and supervisors and providing on-going advanced education for veteran DCFS staff.

If anyone reading this newsletter is interested in or knows someone who is interested in volunteering and or supporting Children and Family Services in any way, please contact one of the IV-E staff members for information. We have individuals who serve as CASA volunteers, an integral part of child safety in the foster care system. This crisis situation cannot be overcome by DCFS alone. The children of our state belong to us all and their story is our story.

The Title IV-E Child Welfare Interdisciplinary Committee (IDT) presented fall lunch and learn titled, “Who’s Who and What do they do: Working with GLBTQ+ Children, Youth and Families” for 156 interdisciplinary undergraduate and graduate students and faculty on Oct. 27, 2015 in the Student Union.

Ms. Duncan and Ms. Gatlin served as co-chairs for the annual DCFS staff education day for over 100 NEA DCFS field staff in Jul. 2015. Trish Holt and Ms. Fullen served as co-chairs for the annual DCFS Supervisor Leadership Conference in Oct. 2015. Karen Fullen served as conference committee member for the A-State Spring Social Work Conference and the Fall 2015 Health Disparities Conference.

Delta Health Disparities Conference

By Dr. Patricia Guy-Walls

The Social Work Department hosted its Third Annual Health Disparities Conference on Nov. 11th 2015 in the Carl R. Reng Student Union of Arkansas State University. The conference was co-chaired by Dr. Patricia Guy-Walls and Dr. Patricia Wilkerson. This year’s conference theme was “Transforming Health Care in the Rural Delta Region.” Dr. Barbara Ross-Lee, D.O., FACOFP, Vice President for Health Sciences and Medical Affairs at the NYIT College of Osteopathic Medicine was the keynote speaker.

The conference forum also included a students’ Poster Track by senior Bachelor-level social work students, which included eight poster presentations: The first place poster topic was “Type 2 Diabetes among African Americans living in the Delta Region” presented by Kisha Clayton, Christina Davis, Tiffany Jackson, Savanna Pemberton and Brad Stout; second place poster entitled: “Risk Factors for African American women with breast cancer in the Rural Delta Region” presented by Natalie Bauer, Marchell Ekoh, Kimberly Lavespere and Chelsea Pierce, and third place poster entitled: “What is the correlation between women mental illness/depression and poverty in the Rural Delta Region” presented by Shauna Tucker, Cassidy Day and Jamie Myers Gill.

Beck PRIDE Center Update

by Lynda Nash, Director

Working relationships with the VA centers in Memphis, Popular Bluff, Missouri and Little Rock continue to be expanded. An Understanding Anger group was offered for six weeks starting in November and the therapeutic combat support group is offered weekly at the BPC. A support group for caregivers of military veterans was started in November and continues this spring biweekly. Additional workshops for veterans and family members will be offered this spring regarding veteran’s benefits, understanding the benefits claim process and estate planning.

The 4th community education workshop, Addictive Thinking by Todd Clements, M.D., was held October 8 at the St. Bernard’s auditorium. There were 140 participants, which included mental health providers and clergy from Northeast Arkansas. Plans for additional workshops to be offered quarterly in 2016 are being developed.

Beck PRIDE Center continues to support educational opportunities for a master’s level and bachelor’s level social work intern, master’s counseling intern, four VA work-study students and two graduate assistants.

Staff and volunteers are involved in a veteran’s court initiative in partnership with the 2nd Judicial District; Memphis VA system; and Midsouth Health systems. Four participants of the center completed national certification as Veteran Mentors for the Veteran’s court initiative.

The Beck PRIDE Center provided a float for the Jonesboro Veteran’s Day Parade. The campus showed their support by lighting the Bell Tower green on Veteran’s Day and a luncheon for veterans was held at the center.

Families Inc., chose the Beck PRIDE Center as one of the recipients of the Howl for Humanity campaign. $2,500 was raised and the check was presented at the football game vs. Texas State.

Six Alumni Honored at Homecoming

Six outstanding graduates of Arkansas State University’s College of Nursing and Health Professions were honored as distinguished alumni during Homecoming activities, Saturday, Oct. 3, 2015.

The list includes Natasha Davis, Communication Disorders; Jill Weeks, Clinical Laboratory Science; Brian Lewis, Physical Therapy; Kellie Cox, nursing; Gary Taber, social work and Kathy Blackman, nursing. Special congratulations to these honored alumni.

Clinical Instructor’s Seminar

The College of Nursing and Health Professions will sponsor the 19th annual Clinical Instructor’s Seminar on April 8, 2016. The topic this year is End of Life Care and Decision-Making. The keynote speaker will be Mrs. Donna Nelson-Lowe. She is the Director of the Flo and Phil Jones Hospice House in Jonesboro. Mrs. Nelson-Lowe is a graduate of the A-State School of Nursing. The morning presentation will be followed by breakout sessions for each of the academic departments.
