

The Military Times has just announced in its October publication "Edge" that ASU has been named one of the top ten schools the nation for Veterans. The survey, sent to more than 4000 colleges and universities, ranked ASU 10th for services to veterans. These services included financial assistance, academic flexibility, campus culture, and support services. ASU Jonesboro was the only Arkansas school to be named in the top 100. Kathy Mathis in the Registrar's Office is the school's VA Certifying Official.

Best for Vets: Colleges 2010

Military Times EDGE invited more than 4,000 colleges and universities to tell us about their programs, policies and resources for veterans. Responses were evaluated in four criteria:

- Financial assistance: Scholarships, discounts and waivers specifically for veterans and their dependents, including the Yellow Ribbon program and relaxed residency restrictions for in-state tuition; policies to protect veterans in case of late-arriving benefits.
- Academic flexibility: Participation in the Servicemembers' Opportunity Colleges consortium and Degree Network Systems and acceptance of military learning and subject tests, like the College Level Examination Program, for academic credit. Also school policies on military-related withdrawals.
- Campus culture: Percentage of vets in the student body and faculty, ROTC programs, Veterans Day observance, local student veteran organizations and training for faculty and staff in veterans issues.
- Support services: Number and kind of staff designated to work with veterans, including the number of students receiving work-study allowances from the Veterans Affairs Department. Also: efforts to reach out to veterans, acclimate them to campus and create a veterans' community, including mentorship programs, special orientation sessions, service projects and academic support.

Schools that tied are listed in alphabetical order.
