Elizabeth Stokes Was Great Resource in Nursing

Elizabeth Stokes, Ed.D., who was particularly talented in curriculum development, also was a tremendous resource for the School of Nursing concerning issues in administration, accreditation and committee processes. Even in a profession where caring for others is the norm, Stokes was known for her extraordinary caring spirit and advocacy of top quality nursing education. She served from 1991 until 2006, retiring as professor of nursing.

Articles submitted by: Tom Moore