Purpose

This interactive workshop will review common emotional challenges experienced by families facing life limiting illness and end of life. We will use a compelling, real-life case study to explore how to identify how denial, ambiguous losses, ambivalence, and anticipatory grief challenge families living with life limiting illness. We will discuss effective ways to build effective care partnerships between community-based experts, medical teams and families. We will explore a range of creative tools that can be used to support meaning making and grieving throughout life limiting illness, end of life, and bereavement. Finally, we will discuss the many ways in which countertransference, compassion fatigue, burnout, and compassion satisfaction that can impact professionals and volunteers working with families at the end of life.

Contact hours will be awarded at the completion of the conference following submission of your evaluation form.
