

Abstract

Ensuring appropriate people's attitudes towards conservation of wildlife is the best strategy for conserving wildlife since its main conservation hazards are humans. Unlike other species on earth, human beings have an unsurpassed ability to conserve wildlife. The Arkansas Wildlife Action Plan was developed to ensure comprehensive wildlife protection.

Arkansas Wildlife Action Plan

Wildlife species extinction is a reality, and several animals are facing the dangers of getting extinct. Without an appropriate plan to ensure wildlife conservation, the imminent human generation will have reduced wildlife species.

Issues Surrounding People's Attitudes toward Conservation

Four-step Process

Starting with identifying and prioritizing wildlife needs, implementing the obligated action, monitoring and evaluating the implementation's progress, and finally adopting the change.

Right Attitude

Due to the increasing human population and subsequent activities, human resources such as land is steadily decreasing and is a significant factor for individuals encroaching wildlife.

Arkansas Game and Fish Commission

Arkansas Game and Fish Commission is solely responsible for running and financing the wildlife action plan. It is tasked to source finance and support projects that effectively and efficiently align their purposes to the program by serving the wildlife species that need the most conservation while filling the entire wildlife species' interest.

Public Participation

All the federal government and locals residing near the habitats and critical stakeholders involved it review and amendments.
