2013 Report

DATA SAY:

100% of students rotating through the public school system received preceptor ratings of 3 or higher for the competency of professional behavior and attitude.

SO WHAT:

Students rotate through the food systems division of public schools under the supervision of a manager or preceptor. Preceptors evaluate the students on three components of professional behavior: professional manner, responsibility, and initiative. Scores range from 1 = Performance and quality of work do not meet expectations to 4 = Performance and quality of work exceed expectations. Expectations for student competency is 3 or above in each category.

HOW WE CHANGED:

For the current cohort of students, the learning outcome of professional behavior and attitude has been met.

WHAT WE GOT:

A different outcome will be assessed for this cohort next year.
